About Scopus

<https://libguides.eur.nl/scopus>

- Abstract & citation database, created by Elsevier

- Content is reviewed & selected by the Content Selection and Advisory Board
- An algorithm creates 'Author profiles', looking at name, affiliation, co-authors, subject areas

Why use Scopus as a source for the Works section?

- Easy way to import publication data with the Search & Link Wizard
 - 'bulk import'
- In most cases, the metadata is complete (title, source title, DOI)
- You also check (and correct) your Scopus Author Profile

Adding publications from Scopus to ORCID

- In your ORCID record, click + Add works
- Choose 'Search & link'
- Click 'Scopus – Elsevier'
- Authorize Scopus
- Follow the steps in the feedback wizard
 - Select the profile(s)
 - Choose a profile name (this will be used in Scopus)
 - Check the list of publications
 - Remove articles that are not yours
 - Search for missing documents by title
 - Review the profile
 - Send the Scopus ID to ORCID (this is added to Other IDs)
 - Send the publications to ORCID

Results

- Scopus Author Profile is 'cleaned' (if necessary)
- Scopus Author ID is added to the 'Other IDs' in the ORCID record
- The ORCID iD is added to the Scopus Author Details page
 - The ORCID iD is NOT added to the publications
 - Users of Scopus can use ORCID iD to search - this finds articles linked to the Scopus Author ID
- The publications currently in Scopus are added to the ORCID record
 - Please note: articles added to Scopus are not automatically added to your ORCID record!

Tips - I

- Use a publication list to check the articles in Scopus
- It can be useful to do a check in Scopus first, via the Authors tab
 - Do you have 1 or more profiles?
 - Are articles missing in the profile?
- When your name consist of multiple parts, you have to adjust the name used by Scopus to search
- It can be useful to create a search alert for your name:
 - Perform a search (Documents tab) for your name – use last name, initial(s)
 - Click the Set alert button above the search results
 - Sign in or create an account
 - Give the alert a name and choose the frequency

Tips - II

- Is an article missing in Scopus?
 - Search by title or DOI – maybe the author name is incorrect in Scopus
 - If the journal and volume are indexed (check via Sources) - use the Add Missing Document form - <https://service.elsevier.com/app/contact/supporthub/scopuscontent/>
 - It will take a couple of weeks before the article is added to Scopus, and sometimes longer
- For older articles: check if the DOI of the article is visible in your ORCID record – if not,
 - add the article also via CrossRef Metadata Search and combine the records or
 - edit the record and add the DOI manually
